No excuses

Richard Dawkins was once asked what he planned to say when he died and stood before God.

The prominent atheist responded, "I will say 'Sir, why have you hidden yourself so well?'"

That sounds very trite, but is it true? Everywhere we look we see the handiwork of God.

The Bible says, "The heavens declare it".

Because of the wonders of creation, those who don't believe in God are called fools and those who ignore God will find they have no excuse for doing so.

Years ago the origin of the universe was proposed as a "Big Bang".

At first it was treated as a joke. Then scientists began to reason that if the universe is expanding, then its origin must have started at the centre.

Before we knew it, the "big-bang theory" was received as an intelligent explanation for our origins.

Not all scientists accept it, but those who do have one main problem - the theory leaves out the bang.

There is no explanation for what caused it, or what was there to cause it. It is like trying to divide one by zero.

To put our faith in God as our Creator, is to also believe God has the power and intelligence to speak to us.

He has done so through the ancient writings of the Bible, promising for centuries that His Son would come to save us from our sin.

No other religious figure has had such an introduction to His arrival as Jesus.

God has spoken to us through His Son.

Whether we like it or not, we will have to do business with Him in the end.

When that happens, a trite answer like that of Richard Dawkins, will not be sufficient.

Yet God is full of compassion and love, and goes to great extremes to declare to us His Son is the Redeemer of the world.

Without Him we have no light. Jesus said, "I am the Light of the World."

He that believes in Me shall not walk in darkness."
